Introduction

Purpose of the Ratio Study

The purpose of the ratio study is:

- To achieve current and uniform market values between physically reappraised properties and properties not physically reappraised but subject to market-based trending, indexing or recalculation of values within groups of similar properties.
- To measure the level of assessment. This is the relationship between the previous Real Market Values and the values required for the current roll.
- To identify adjustment factors that will achieve the required Real Market Values for the current roll.
- To document the analysis and decision making process.
- To provide data for managing Multnomah County's appraisal and value adjustment programs.

Study Format

This year's report is prepared in the Oregon Department of Revenue approved format and intends to be flexible and to illustrate the value adjustment program. The supporting sales listings are included in a separate volume.

Sales analyses were stratified and value adjustment factors determined by property types:

Residential Land	Multifamily Land
Residential Improved	Multifamily Improved
Condominiums	Row Houses
Commercial Land	Floating Homes
Commercial Improved	Manufactured Homes

The division of the County geographically into its 148 residential neighborhoods, 8 floating property neighborhoods, 18 manufactured home neighborhoods, 19 multifamily neighborhoods, 19 commercial neighborhoods, and 11 industrial neighborhoods is useful to analysts. See Appendix E for appraisal maps.

Analysts often combine neighborhoods into groups to provide representative sales sets that aid in concluding value adjustments. The assessment system allows for adjusting values by market area. These can be individual neighborhoods, groups of neighborhoods, the entire county, or other market-based grouping such as construction style, quality, property types, and locational amenities.

Sales Ratio Studies by Property Type

Adjustment Narrative Introduction

This is a combined report of properties on both recalculating and trended methods. Recalculated properties rely on computer-assisted mass appraisal models affecting groups of similar properties adjusted annually to generate values at 100% of market. All of Multnomah County's residential properties, much of its multifamily properties, and some commercial properties use a recalculation model. Non-recalculated properties receive a traditional market trend adjustment. As a result, the detailed study pages that follow may include more than one analysis for the same property type. Both adjustment methods apply annual trending or indexing factors and do not involve physical reappraisal of individual properties.

The selection of statistical ratio indicators takes into account many factors. Extremely skewed ratio sets will lessen the reliability of the arithmetic mean indicator. Large variations in sale prices or assessed values will affect the weighted mean indicator. The median is a good indicator when the array contains a proper distribution of ratios near the center of its range. Multnomah County relies primarily on the median indicator in its ratio study for these reasons: It is the basis for the coefficient of dispersion; it provides a single "target" when adjusting appraisal models; and recalculated values tend to result in ratios grouped near the center of the array.

Analysts consider the above statistical factors, along with appraisers' observations, time trends, recent market indications, coefficients of dispersion, and standard deviations when selecting the most representative measure of central tendency. What follows are adjustments to components of recalculating models, or application of overall trend factors, to bring properties to 100% of market value as of the assessment date.

Statistics presented are measurements for a 12-month period (or longer if necessary to achieve an adequate sale sample) preceding the assessment date of January 1st. Prior to market adjustments, ratio indicators are used to measure the relationship between last-certified appraised values and sale prices during the assessment year. Because those relationships may not remain constant throughout the year, analysts make adjustments for time (changing market conditions) when sufficient data exists and a pattern is evident. For property categories with adequate sales, analysts plot monthly sale ratios and develop trend lines using regression analysis. Quarterly and semi-annual analyses are typical for property categories with fewer sales and multi-year sale sets. Sale prices are then adjusted up or down from their initial date of sale within the study period to the assessment date. Each section that follows briefly describes market adjustments and time adjustments.

Residential

100 Residential Vacant Land

Multnomah County is one of the oldest and most urbanized areas in the region. There is little inventory of vacant residential land in most neighborhoods, and what is available is made up of atypical parcels, infill lots, and redevelopment sites. Much of new residential development is multifamily or row houses, which do not lend themselves to extracting meaningful land values in traditional single-family detached neighborhoods.

The estimation of residential base lot values employs an allocation method. Based on the principle of balance and the related concept of contribution, the allocation method asserts there is a normal or typical ratio of land to total property value for specific categories of real estate in specific locations.

Analysts estimate and analyze residential base lot values annually by neighborhood, using the coefficient of dispersion to measure the reliability of the land allocation to total market value. Routine testing of resulting land values for reasonability against available sales occurs as conclusions are drawn. Target allocation factors can differ between neighborhoods due to characteristics such as home quality, parcel size, and location.

101 Residential Improved Properties

Ratio analysts study residential property by individual geographic neighborhoods or groups of neighborhoods with similar characteristics and market influences. Updates to residential values occur annually (if needed) by adjusting underlying computer-based valuation tables built from local sales data and other market analyses.

Analysts concluded a single, countywide time trend for the 2022 single-family residential market study and adjusted sale prices strongly upward to the assessment date, incorporating a one-year sale sample into the market study. A total 9,506 residential sales underwent analysis after the identification and removal of 190 outliers using Interquartile Range (IQR) trimming, a method endorsed by the Department of Revenue and the International Association of Assessing Officers (IAAO). The study excluded distressed sales. Where appropriate, combining sales sets in similar neighborhoods ensured a representative sample in those locations.

This report shows median, mean, and weighted mean sale ratios before-and-after adjustment, along with the percentage of change between the 2021 and 2022 median RMV's for all unchanged accounts within the neighborhood group. Percent of change calculations reflect only unchanged properties sold and unsold, excluding new property. Because sale ratios and change ratios are drawn from different data sets, they may not always move up or down in tandem.

This report includes COD and PRD history for each neighborhood. When reporting neighborhoods grouped for analysis, this history presented is that of any previous market study group that the neighborhood belonged to in the past. This may differ from the current neighborhood study group.

In order to better align sale samples to the population that they represent, and to produce more precise adjustments within market areas, the report separates findings related to row houses, small multifamily (2 to 4-plex), and small neighborhood commercial properties on recalculating methodology. These improvement types also get separate time trend studies and conclusions found in the appendix of this document. Subsequent market analysis of these groups include stratification by market area and neighborhood, but the resulting statistical reports are on a countywide basis.

102 Condominiums

Market conditions analysis for condominiums involved stratification by class, market area, and neighborhood. Core neighborhoods in or near downtown Portland saw much less appreciation over time than neighborhoods outside the downtown core. Two time trends, one for core neighborhoods and one for non-core neighborhoods is the best fit for 2022.

The market analysis of condominiums incorporated a one-year sale sample of 2,095 sales after the removal of 10 outliers using the trimmed mean method. Analysis of residential condominiums includes stratification by market area, neighborhood, and complex, but the report of resulting adjustments and statistics are on a countywide basis.

119 Real Property Manufactured Homes

All manufactured homes on real property remain on recalculation methods adjusted annually. Analysis includes stratification by market area and neighborhood; however, the report of results are on a countywide basis.

200 Commercial Land

The 2022 assessment cycle marks the third year of applying new recalculating land tables. To help facilitate conversion to the Orion CAMA system, old recalculating commercial land studies were retired in 2017 and most commercial land moved temporarily to a trending valuation method. Commercial appraisal makes significant annual progress putting land onto a new recalculating study that receives intensive annual review and calibration by an appraisal-analyst team. Just over 6,500 vacant and improved commercial parcels are now on recalculating land tables.

The 2022 ratio analysis for vacant commercial land relied on a four-year sale set. Analysis for land sales considered property class, location, and valuation method. All stratifications showed similar time trend curves indicating no clear appreciation over the four-year period. Values for vacant commercial land appear flat. Therefore, sale prices required no time trend. Recalculating land tables continue to be a success. Due to flattening land values, vacant land sales indicate acceptable ratio statistics. Similarly, there is no market adjustment to vacant commercial land for 2022.

201 Commercial Improved Properties

Commercial accounts continue to be in various stages of conversion to annual cost or income-based recalculation models. Unless otherwise noted, the report separates statistical sales analysis according to appraisal method; Trended property adjusts by a factor, while recalculated property adjusts through changes to underlying valuation tables affecting groups of similar properties.

Newly drawn neighborhoods, and newly developed recalculating income models for retail, office, and warehouse properties are now available for conversion from trended methods and will facilitate physical reappraisal projects in the future. As recovery in the hospitality sector advances, appraisers and analysts will also adjust an ongoing reappraisal of hotels heavily impacted by the pandemic.

Analysts studied a four-year sales sample for all commercial property types. With regard to whether sale activity showed effects of the pandemic, effects over time were limited to flattening values through 2020 and 2021. Due to variations in property characteristics, quantity of sales, and geographic influences, sales were stratified by property type and time trends analyzed quarterly or semi-annually. Ratio analysts determined that time had an effect on sale price in all neighborhoods and on all improved property types. Analysts identified a few different time curves. Most commercial and multifamily properties showed gradual appreciation over the study period. Commercial property in the downtown Core saw gradual value decreases, while warehouse properties saw significant value appreciation beyond most other commercial property types. Three different time trends were applied to improved commercial property sale prices to adjust them to the assessment date.

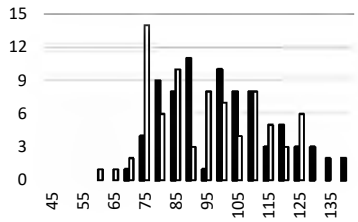

Ratio analysts conducted market studies on a time trended sale sample that encompassed commercial property, warehouses, and manufactured home parks. Analysts excluded short sales and REO sales as atypical conditions of sale. Unless otherwise noted, conclusions in this section result from a representative sales sample from calendar 2018 through the first quarter of 2022. After examining the sale set by neighborhood, neighborhood groupings, business groupings, and by prop code, there was compelling evidence of differing value changes for commercial property types.

Manufactured home parks and recalculating warehouses saw significant value increases driven largely by strong rent growth and stable occupancy. There was also clear evidence the downtown core of Portland experienced different value changes than property in areas outside of the core. A small set of property in the core, labeled Core Adjust, comprised of high-rise office, commercial condominiums, mixed use, and retail stores receive a downward adjustment. A Core Hold group, comprised of all remaining core properties, indicated no change in value. This set receives no adjustment.

Adjustments to commercial property outside the city core occurred in six different groupings this year. Outside Core 1 showed value declines and receives a moderate downward adjustment. This group includes generic shops, retail strip centers, and mixed-use properties. Outside Core 2 holds properties that show flat values, which receive no adjustment. Outside Core 3 is comprised of various small office, dining restaurants, and large retail stores. This set indicates moderate value increases. Outside Core 4 includes auto dealerships, senior housing, and small retail stores. It showed robust value increases. Finally, there was enough evidence to make a targeted adjustment to commercial condominiums outside the Core. Most condominiums, held in Outside Core 5, showed modest value declines, while those in neighborhood CN15 (Outside Core 6) showed strong value increases.

Multifamily

700 Multifamily Land

Analysis of multifamily land happens in conjunction with other classes of vacant land (Property classes 200 and 2003) and adjustment of sale prices for time is consistent with the larger study. Market analysis concluded that no index to traditionally trended vacant land properties was necessary to bring about acceptable assessment levels. Multifamily land is also included in the greater commercial recalculating land study reviewed and calibrated by an appraisal-analyst team annually. The four-year sale set representative of that study showed no further adjustment to recalculating tables necessary for 2022.

701 Multifamily Improved Properties Greater Than Four Units

Analysts stratify multifamily sales based on appraisal method for adjustment and reporting purposes. Like other commercial property, sales of traditionally trended property inform concluded overall adjustment factors, while sales of property valued on recalculation methodology exclusively affect any changes made to underlying income model tables.

A comprehensive single four-year time adjustment study for commercial and multifamily properties concluded a modest countywide market condition effect on sale prices, adjusting them to the assessment date on a quarterly basis. Remarkably similar trend curves across a range of strata indicated gradual appreciation over the first two years of the period, with flattening values into 2020 and 2021. The first quarter of 2022 tentatively shows values starting to appreciate consistent with third party market reports that generally report modest recovery from effects of the pandemic.

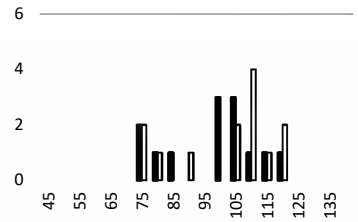

Annual recalculation of court-style multifamily property on income models continues to be successful. The multifamily appraisal team completed moving the inventory of court properties to a recalculating income model methodology developed for all court style multifamily property. Since moving away from traditional trending for this set of properties, we have continually recalibrated and tested the models' components with market studies of rents, vacancy, expenses, capitalization rates, and fees. The court models continue to be high performers with assessment statistics that indicate low dispersion and little price related bias. This method continues to achieve better results, more efficiently, than did historical appraise-and-trend procedures.

A four-year sample of 277 sales after interquartile trimming indicate a modest increase in value countywide from the prior year for the court models. Consistent results between larger and smaller court models show no need for separate adjustments. Remarkable consistency applies across location and time as well. No additional adjustment to internal model factors is necessary for 2022 valuation.

Multifamily property remaining on traditional trending methodology provided a smaller sale set stratified by property type and geography during analysis. This set includes all walkup and elevator properties countywide. Analysis of all multifamily property regardless of property type showed similar movement, and this trended set receives a small increase to improvement values, while holding land values static.

Appendix C: Glossary of Key Terms

After Ratio
For recalculated properties, this is the actual or expected level of assessment after the adjustment process. For trended properties, this is the forecast or actual level of assessment after ratio study concluded adjustments.

Arithmetic Mean
Traditionally called "average", the sum of the ratios divided by the number of ratios. Distorted by extremely high or low ratios.

Average Deviation
The average of the absolute differences between each ratio and the Median.

Average Improvement Allocation
The average ratio of improvement value to total RMV of the sale set. Translates the indicated change to an improvement-only trend for properties where land values are already calibrated to market levels.

Before Ratio,
This is the ratio of the prior year's roll values to sale prices during the study period. Sale prices may be adjusted for time. In some cases the before ratio may be calculated after the prior year roll close and before the analysis begins if some of the sales used in the set were reappraised-to-study at the time of inspection. This typically only occurs with previously trended commercial properties that are moving to recalculation this year.

Classification
Designates whether the neighborhood is Homogeneous, Nonhomogeneous, or Rural.

COD Standard
Statistical standard per classification as indicated by OAR 150 308.380.

Coefficient Of Dispersion (COD)
The average deviation expressed as a percentage of the Median. Also referred to as COD.

Coefficient Of Variance
The standard deviation expressed as a percentage of the Arithmetic Mean.

Geometric Mean
The Nth root of the product of the ratios, where N is the number of ratios in the array or listing. Geometric Mean decreases distortion caused by extreme ratios and will be lower than the Arithmetic Mean, especially if ratios vary widely.

History/Performance Indicators
Five-year historical performance of Coefficient of Dispersion (COD) and Price Related Differential (PRD) where available.

Improvement Adjustment
The required adjustment to bring last year's assessment roll values to the statutorily required 100% of market level. Calculated by dividing 100 by the Before Ratio.

Land Adjustment
A factor applied to land of a given type. In cases where there are insufficient sales to calculate a reliable trend for vacant land in a market area, land is given the same factor as improved properties in that property category.

Market Area
A neighborhood or market group/stratification identified for analysis. The assessment system provides for adjusting values by market areas. These can be individual neighborhoods, groups of neighborhoods, the entire county, or other market-based groupings such as construction style, quality, and locational amenities.

Market Group
A collection of individual neighborhoods with similar quality and locational amenities.

Median
The value with the same number of ratios above as below. Distributions that display sizable gaps near their center have unreliable Medians.

Neighborhood/Study Area
Identifies the individual neighborhood or study group that produced the adjustments concluded for the market area. In some cases, the same study may apply to multiple market areas.

Percent Change
A variation of Total Adjustment used for those neighborhoods using a recalculation method of valuation. Rather than stating a factor (multiplier) by which previous values will be adjusted, the Percent Change reports the percentage increase/decrease in median Real Market Values resulting from changes to the valuation model affecting values of similar property in each market area.

Price Related Differential (PRD)
A measure of vertical equity calculated by dividing the mean ratio by the weighted mean ratio. A PRD greater than 1.00 indicates higher priced properties have lower ratios than moderate or low priced properties. Also referred to as PRD.

Property Type
Identifies the property i.e. residential, commercial, or multifamily.

Selected Ratio
The statistical measurement that best indicates the central tendency for the sales sample during the analysis period.

Standard Deviation
A measure of deviation from the Arithmetic Mean for a normally distributed population.

Statistical Data
Includes the number of sales, a frequency distribution graph of the sale ratios, the number of accounts in the market area, the total Real Market Value of land and improvements of sales in the study, and average and median sale price of properties sold.

Time Trend Factor
Adjustment for changes in market conditions, applied to sale prices so that they reflect a common assessment date.

Trend Adjustment/Median Change
A multiplicative factor (for trended neighborhoods) or the percentage change since the previous year (for recalculated neighborhoods). The source of this factor is the individual study. Note that the individual study may group neighborhoods together and report an aggregate adjustment for information purposes only.

Weighted Mean
The sum of the Total Real Market Values divided by the sum of Total Adjusted Sales Prices. Sales with extremely high or low values will have the most effect on this measure.
