

Division: DCHS Administration

Program Characteristics: One-Time-Only Request

Program Description

The Immigrant Family Resilience and Stability Support Program represents a strategic evolution from the original efforts through this program offer, which primarily focused on the initial placement and resettlement of newly arrived families. While those early programs were crucial in addressing immediate housing and integration needs, the landscape of challenges immigrant families face has fundamentally shifted. The program has evolved to meet the critical, current needs of client families facing increasing instability and complex crises. The primary focus is now on providing direct client assistance to support family resilience and ensure housing stability. This shift is a necessary response to several escalating challenges that threaten the well-being and stability of immigrant families. Heightened immigration enforcement creates an environment of fear, leading to family separation, loss of income, and increased housing instability. Families are also experiencing detrimental impacts to the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), limiting access to adequate food. Many immigrant families lack access to federal programs like Medicaid and other critical social services, leaving them without necessary resources to manage health crises, secure stable housing, and other financial impacts.

Equity Statement

By focusing on direct assistance, the Immigrant Family Resilience and Stability Program aims to be a proactive, reliable, and equitable source of support. This approach creates greater access to resources, empowering families to respond effectively to crises and maintain their stability and dignity in the face of systemic challenges.
