1. Case Management is defined as a method of providing services and a collaborative relationship between a service provider and a participant. The functions of participant-centered case management include:
- Assessing strengths and needs
 - Developing individualized action plans
 - Coordinating all agencies, providers, and resources involved in the plan
 - Monitoring, revising, following-up on, and evaluating action plans (as appropriate)
 - Documenting contacts and services
 - Advocating for organizational, community, and institutional responsiveness
 - Using required knowledge of and access to resources in delivering direct services and client assistance funds (as available)
 - Motivating, supporting, and mentoring individuals to maximize potential of achieving action plan goals and possibility for engaging in the larger community
 - Looking beyond individual action plans to wider trends for the purpose of evaluating and refining the service system
 - Seizing opportunities to influence social change
 - Following-up after service completion (as necessary)
