Justice Reinvestment in Oregon and Multnomah County

State Rep. Williamson gave an update on the progress for finalizing the state's public safety budget. The state considered legislation to reduce prison population growth through local justice reinvestment. The proposal assumes the state will save money by holding the prison population flat and these savings could then be reinvested in the local criminal justice systems that contributed to the reduction in prison population growth. The Executive Committee continued the discussion on this legislation that started with the Justice Reinvestment Workgroup. The Workgroup met eight times to discuss potential ways to reduce Multnomah County's contribution to the Oregon prison population. The status and content of the proposed justice reinvestment legislation was uncertain at the time of the discussion. Concern was expressed on whether the State's proposed financial incentives would be enough to offset the cost of implementing changes locally. Due to the uncertainty of the proposed legislation the workgroup was unable to develop specific recommendations. The workgroup was able to create a blueprint for interagency cooperation that could be beneficial to other counties.

Action Item: The Justice Reinvestment Workgroup was given the LPSCC Executive Committee's permission to discuss their cooperative efforts with the state legislature.

A report summarizing the efforts of the Justice Reinvestment Workgroup can be found on the LPSCC website.
