Executive Summary

The African-American Program serves high risk Black/African American men and women transitioning back to the community from prison. Black and African American people under supervision are over-represented in the criminal justice system. The gang unit serves high risk Black/African American men and women, but also serves men and women associated with white supremacist gangs and other racial/ethnic gang activity/group violence.

Program Description

The Department of Community Justice (DCJ) is committed to intervening in systemic racism that creates unnecessary barriers for Black/African American men and women on supervision, including: lack of education, employment experience and/or opportunities, and supportive housing (or housing in neighborhoods with social cohesion). These barriers present criminogenic risks for reoffending and have a negative impact on successful transition into the community. Individuals in this unit are classified as high risk based on risk assessment scores. They are also identified prior to being released from prison as being involved with gang/group violence based on an established set of criteria.

DCJ works with culturally responsive community based providers who have demonstrated effectiveness in improving outcomes for Black and African American people in the areas of education, employment, culturally responsive cognitive behavioral therapy and family stability. This program provides access to behavioral interventions that seek to identify and change criminal thinking errors and emotional response, such as Habilitation Empowerment Accountability Therapy (HEAT) curriculum, a culturally responsive cognitive behavioral intervention program designed to reflect and address the unique experiences and needs of Black/African American men and women. The program also addresses the stigma attached to behavioral health in the Black/African American community by collaborating with the Health Department to provide culturally responsive behavioral health services to this population.

Black and African American individuals within this program have shown an increased willingness to participate in programs that use mentors that have had similar life experiences as their own. The relationship that develops between the mentor and the gang member is a key factor for engaging with pro-social resources, relationships, and behavior change, which results in crime desistance. A recent evaluation of the HEAT program demonstrated promising results in the reduction of future violent crimes, and increased motivation by program participants to desist from crime and be change makers in their communities.
