Law Enforcement Assisted Diversion (LEAD) Update

Karen Kern, Central City Concern; Lt. Jeff Niiya, Portland Police Bureau; and Andrew Sherwood, Deputy District Attorney presented an update on the LEAD Program. The presentation included partners, program operations, enrollment numbers, a map of the current and expansion geographical area, demographics, new PCS arrests and Treatment First. See the presentation for more details.

A LEAD client shared her story of law enforcement contact and positive relationships with LEAD case workers.

Treatment First Update

JR Ujifusa, MCDA, gave an overview of the Treatment First Program. Eligible participants have been arrested and arraigned, and then are assessed for risk and needs. They can be eligible for full dismissal of the charges.

Lisa Lewis, Dept. of Community Justice, gave some statistics for individuals (see presentation) in each of the risk needs quadrants. Bryan Francesconi (MPD) addressed the challenges and noted the program is great for people who care about a conviction and who want treatment; it is challenging to incentivise those who do not.

There was discussion about having peers and mentors. Currently those in STOP Court have access to mentors.

DA Rod Underhill noted data around this crime category showed high racial and ethnic disparities: LEAD and Treatment First were created to help decrease collateral consequences and disparities. The Criminal Justice Commission (CJC) is about to roll out a report that shows a reduction in disparities.
