The Juvenile Unit promotes community safety through a fair and developmentally appropriate response to crimes committed by youth under the age of 18. The unit handles cases ranging from low-level misdemeanors to serious felonies and homicides, with an emphasis on accountability that supports positive behavioral change and long-term public safety.

The unit works closely with the Department of Community Justice and other partners to resolve cases in ways that protect the community, hold youth accountable, and reduce the likelihood of future system involvement. A core goal of the Juvenile Unit is to limit unnecessary entry into the adult criminal justice system through early, proportional responses.

All referred cases are reviewed by Deputy District Attorneys to ensure legal sufficiency and appropriate use of formal charges. When appropriate, the unit supports diversion, informal handling, and restorative justice options that address harm while avoiding the lasting consequences of prosecution.

Through initiatives such as Transforming Juvenile Probation, the Juvenile Unit expands access to supervision and services without formal charges, allowing youth to receive accountability and support without a criminal record.

Program Description

The Domestic Violence Unit prosecutes cases involving family and intimate partner violence, including physical and sexual assaults, strangulation, kidnapping, and violations of Family Abuse Prevention Act restraining orders. The unit's primary focus is to protect survivors and ensure community safety while holding defendants accountable in ways that reduce future harm.

The unit works closely with law enforcement, the Department of Community Justice, and community-based domestic violence organizations to support coordinated, survivor-centered responses. Prosecutors collaborate with advocates and service providers to ensure survivors have access to safety planning, legal protections, and support services throughout the case process.

When appropriate, the unit supports alternatives to traditional prosecution, including deferred sentencing supervised intervention program for eligible first-time offenders. These approaches emphasize accountability, behavior change, and long-term safety for survivors and their families, while helping interrupt cycles of violence. The unit also works to identify justice involved survivors and divert their cases away from traditional prosecution through referral to services at our partner agency, Bradley Angle.

Equity Statement

The Domestic Violence Unit supports equitable access to justice for survivors who experience disproportionate impacts of domestic violence, including individuals from underserved and marginalized communities. Through trauma-informed prosecution, culturally responsive advocacy, and coordinated partnerships, the unit works to reduce barriers to safety, accountability, and long-term stability.

Program Description

The Misdemeanor Trial Unit (MTU) reviews and prosecutes all non-domestic violence misdemeanor cases referred to MCDA, determining whether prosecution is legally sufficient and appropriate. Unit attorneys manage cases from initial review through resolution, including trial preparation, court appearances, sentencing, and restitution, ensuring timely and consistent application of legal standards.

The MTU also staffs specialty dockets that provide alternatives to traditional prosecution, including Driving Under the Influence of Intoxicants (DUI) diversion and conditional discharge options for eligible misdemeanor drug cases, including cases impacted by House Bill 4002. Through careful case screening, alternative dispositions, and consistent trial readiness, the unit supports accountability while reserving more intensive system responses for cases that pose greater public safety concerns.

Equity Statement

The Misdemeanor Trial Unit promotes equitable outcomes by applying consistent legal screening and expanding access to diversion and alternative resolutions for low-level offenses where appropriate. These practices help reduce the disproportionate impact of misdemeanor enforcement on communities of color while maintaining fairness and accountability.

Program Characteristics:

Program Description

The Strategic Prosecution Unit (SPU) is an evidence-informed program that addresses high-volume system users through focused, data-guided prosecution and intervention. The unit identifies individuals responsible for repeated criminal activity that disproportionately impacts community safety and works to interrupt cycles of harm.

Using objective criteria and structured case review, SPU prosecutors determine when traditional prosecution alone is unlikely to improve outcomes and, when appropriate, seek court-supervised mental health treatment, substance use treatment, and structured community supervision. The unit also incorporates the MCDA Access Attorney Program, applying a place-based prosecution model that embeds prosecutors in designated communities to address local safety concerns through coordinated, non-carceral interventions and focused accountability.

By combining strategic prosecution, community engagement, and access to services, the SPU model aims to reduce repeat offending, limit reliance on incarceration, and improve long-term community safety.

Equity Statement

The Strategic Prosecution Unit promotes equitable outcomes by using objective data, consistent legal standards, and community-informed decision-making for individuals with frequent justice system involvement. By expanding access to treatment, diversion, and survivor-centered services in communities most affected by crime and victimization, the unit works to reduce disparities while prioritizing safety, fairness, and accountability.

The Treatment, Accountability & Specialty Courts Unit (TASC) coordinates MCDA's specialty courts to provide a consistent, team-based approach to cases where treatment and supervision are more effective than incarceration alone. By centralizing these courts within a single unit, MCDA ensures stable staffing, consistent training, and uniform application of evidence-informed practices.

The unit supports multiple specialty courts that address underlying drivers of criminal behavior, including substance use disorders, mental health needs, and other destabilizing factors. Prosecutors work closely with the courts, supervision agencies, and service providers to hold participants accountable while connecting them to treatment, housing, employment support, and intensive supervision.

Through these courts, the unit promotes public safety by reducing repeat offending, limiting unnecessary use of prison, and supporting long-term stability for participants whose cases are appropriate for structured, treatment-focused alternatives.

Equity Statement

The Treatment, Accountability & Specialty Courts Unit promotes equitable outcomes by expanding access to treatment-based alternatives to incarceration and ensuring consistent, trauma-informed practices across all specialty courts. By using data to monitor participation and outcomes, the unit works to identify and reduce disparities while supporting accountability, recovery, and long-term community safety.

Division: Violent Crimes Division

Program Characteristics:

Program Description

The Homicide Unit prosecutes cases involving homicide, the most serious crimes handled by MCDA. The unit focuses exclusively on these cases, where careful legal analysis, early coordination with investigators, and consistent application of legal standards are essential to public safety and justice.

Deputy District Attorneys assigned to the Homicide Unit partner with law enforcement from the earliest stages of a case, including responding to homicide scenes and working closely with detectives throughout the investigation. This early and sustained involvement supports thorough case development, accountability for unlawful violence, and meaningful engagement with victims' families.

Through focused prosecution and close collaboration with investigative partners, the Homicide Unit seeks to resolve cases in a way that provides accountability, supports victims and families, and helps prevent further violence, strengthening public trust in the justice system.

Equity Statement

The Homicide Unit promotes fair and unbiased prosecution by applying consistent legal standards and trauma-informed practices from the outset of each case through resolution. By emphasizing accountability, transparency, and respectful engagement with victims' families, the unit supports equitable treatment and helps build trust in communities most affected by lethal violence.
