Oregon Criminal Defense and Reentry Switchboard

Federal Public Defender Lisa Hay presented the new Oregon Criminal Defense & Reentry Switchboard: https://reentry.switchboardhq.com. The Switchboard gives supporters, service providers, defenders, and people with needs a way to connect. Lisa requested people participate and use the switchboard (after giving Lisa a heads-up). Lisa offered to give the presentation to other groups. She can report back on utilization in a few months.

Oregon Youth Authority Feeder System Study

Margaret Braun, a former researcher for OYA, gave a presentation of the OYA Feeder Study, which analyzed linked data to track youth system and service engagement before they came to the Oregon Youth Authority.

The presentation gave the reasons for the OYA Feeder Study, data sources, guiding questions and progress, details about the three studies, key takeaways, limitations to interpretation, and future research and policy/practice. For details, see the presentation.

There was discussion about the challenges of the project and getting updated data. It was noted OHSU is doing a similar study using birth records.

Kristi Racer, researcher at OYA, gave a presentation about predicting first adult felony convictions to help answer the following questions:

- (1) How prevalent are prior social services among First-Time Adult Felony Offenders?
- (2) Can we predict First-Time Adult Felony Convictions from prior services?
- (3) Which service contacts are the best predictors of First-Time Adult Felony Convictions?

The study is a parallel series of analyses looking at people who got their first felony conviction between ages 18-25. The presentation included a preview of the findings, dataset time window, data timeline (14 years of records). See the presentation for details about the prevalence of prior services, predicting adult felony convictions, what services mattered most, and major predictors.

There was discussion about how income/class is embedded in the data sets, institutionalized racism, and mental health stigma.

Oregon Enterprise Data Analytics (within DHS) is a good contact point for questions.

The meeting was adjourned.
