Opioid Rapid Response Project

Samantha Byers, Opioid Rapid Response Project Coordinator of the Oregon Health Authority, presented on the implementation of House Bill 4143, the Legislature's recent effort to tackle the Opioid epidemic. For an overview, implementation success and challenges, pilot project details, and funding & partnerships, see the presentation.

Dr. Paul Lewis noted the following:

- In Oregon, white people have highest rate of opiate use, but Native Americans followed by African Americans have the highest rates of overdose deaths.
- Deaths are 5-15% higher for re-entry populations.
- Options for medical treatment include a shot that blocks opiates, methadone, and suboxone.

Questions and points of discussion from members and attendees included:

- What is the capacity for linking people into community-based treatment? Answer: There is capacity for outpatient treatment, but limited capacity if housing is needed.
- Sheriff Mike Reese talked about community-based non-profits wanting to leverage what they are doing.
- There was discussion about involving peers in the planning process. Sheriff Reese talked about a plan to involve peer navigators at booking. Lakeesha Dumas had ideas about intervening post-release. Peer involvement will be critical.
- There was discussion about how this pilot can be applied to all substances.

Parent Partnership Handbook

Annette Majekodumni and Justice Rajez with POIC Community Healing Initiative (CHI) presented information about the process of creating the Parent Handbook for Justice Involved Youth. The handbook is now printed in both English and Spanish. An invitation to the handbook launch celebration was given.

The following points were highlighted:

- Many parents have their own trauma and negative experience with systems.
- Inclusion and authentic relationships are key.
- The process was parent-led and expert-supported.
- Ask the impacted.
- The handbook will be shared electronically.
